

PURPLE HAZE

One way to analyze the 2004 presidential election results yields a black-and-white case of red and blue, as shown in the inset map, which appeared widely in the media. The same numbers can also be represented with a very different result, as shown in this map, prepared by the UO Geography Department's InfoGraphics Lab. Thanks to Oregon writer Bob Heilman for suggesting this map.

